COMEDY.

They parted with clasps of hand
And kisses and burning tears.
They met in a foreign land
After some twenty years

Met as acquaintances meet,
Smilingly tranquil eyed—
Not even the least little beat
Of the heart upon either side.

They chatted of this and that,
The nothings that make up life,
She in a Gainsborough hat
And he in black for his wife.

THE CYCLIST'S CAPE.

"You must take it," Mme. Renne said to her husband. She was a small brunette, thin and aggressive, who strongly reminded one of little pet dogs who received visitors by snapping and snarling at their heels as soon as the front door is opened.

Mr. Renne was a big, jolly dry goods merchant, and he watched his spouse ruefully as she unhooked a heavy cloth cape from the rack in the hall. He had hoped against hope that for once she would forget to lumber his bicycle with that clumsy old cloak, it was such a bore.

"It looks like rain," the little woman continued, "and I am not going to allow you to come back drenched to the skin, much as it would please you. A cold means money, and our physician is a fool. He is incapable of curing either pneumonia or pleurisy. So kindly tell me what would become of me in case of your death? Do you suppose your parents are going to support me? No, indeed, and you know it, and as I would never marry again I should have my bread to beg from door to door. Not that it would make much difference to you, but I should prefer suicide to beggary."

While speaking with a fluency which would have done credit to a politician on a stumping tour, she rolled the cape into a tight bundle, tied a bit of string around it, and there it was, ready to be fastened on the handle of his wheel.

"In your way?" she exclaimed in shrill repetition. "Well, I would really like to know why? Oh I see, it is not the swell thing, and you are afraid that the ladies you pass on the road will think you are carrying a bundle. Is that it? If you must know my mind, I think I am a perfect idiot to allow you so much freedom. How do I know where you go or what you do? You tell me any story you like when you come back, and it is false just as likely as not."

Renne bowed his head patiently to the storm, for well he knew that one word, one timid protest, would exasperate his wife into further parley, and the discussion would drag on indefinitely, but as today she seemed rather more amiable than usual he held his tongue.

"See that it does not touch the wheel or get soiled," she went on. "If you use it, roll it up wrong side out again before replacing it, and do not lose the string as you did last time. What are you looking at? I really think you might have the civility to listen to me when I speak to you."

Renne was contemplating with forced calm the serene blue sky and trying to catch the placidity shining in its azure depths.

"Please do not kiss me goodby. I am not to be fooled and cajoled so easily. What are you waiting for?" And, turning toward her husband, she saw him making mock gestures of poverty. "No money! Of course not. Well, here are 5 francs. I shall require an exact account of your expenses, though, and please look at the change. You are so apt to take odds and ends of coin which are difficult to pass. Now go. Try to avoid drinking while you are warm and keep out of drafts."

Mr. Renne tucked the money into his waistcoat pocket, kissed his wife gravely—for he did not dare to appear too gay, as she would have deeply resented any manifestation of joviality—and started down the stairs in search of his bicycle with the necessary amount of moderation and decorum which he knew best suited Mme. Renne. As he fastened the cloak carefully by a strap to the bicycle he felt that sharp eyes were fixed upon him from windows above, and as he pedaled away he carried the look with him, like the famous Parthian arrow of bygone days, stuck in his back.

When once well out into the open country he expanded his lungs and took in great breaths of air, while the blood rushed to his face and his eyes almost started from their sockets. Then, very slowly he exhaled it all until he grew pale from—could it be relief?

The sun, high in the heavens, shed its genial rays full upon him as he pedaled frantically along the highway, with arms akimbo, doubled nearly in two over his handles and wild with delight. The smooth white road unraveled before him like a ball of twine, the horizon appeared to advance toward him in friendly welcome, and the bushes and trees, which looked like tiny specks in the distance, grew steadily, as if by magic, under his gaze and assumed massive and stately proportions. To Mr. Renne the landscape seemed to be running the other way, clumps of wood and bracken, little houses, elm trees, fields and milestones melted away before him like a bit of sugar. He whistled gayly as his bicycle devoured space, scorching down the hills, attacking the up grades with easy assurance, while on a level no bird would have entered into competition.

It was simply glorious. Instead of crushing his daily cares and trials under his feet he rode lightly over them, and, leaving them far behind, looked back at them over his shoulder scornfully, as if they were lost forever and as though it would be a useless effort on their part to attempt to catch up with him again. The idea, however, of their close proximity to his heels worked the pedals faster and faster, while big drops of perspiration fell through the clouds of dust which his energy raised upon the road beneath.

Almost intoxicated as he was by his enthusiastic flight through space, he never noticed that the vicious little string around his cape had slowly and wickedly unfastened, as though it wanted to play him a nasty trick. While he was given over to his savage and all but animal enjoyment the hypocritical bit of cord snapped in two, and off flew the cape like a streak of light, unnoticed by his eye, which at the time was eagerly scanning a signpost. Nearly a mile behind him the cloak, black and inanimate, lay in the middle of the road, while the bicycle, lighter than before, tore deliriously on its winged way.

His blissful ignorance was short lived, however, and the awakening was most cruel, for, as he sat under the awning of a friendly restaurant, rapturously sipping materno and seltzer and gazing with dreamy eyes beaming with love and pride at his wheel, which leaned gracefully against a tree in front of him, a premonition seized him. What was missing? And with a cry he sprang to his feet. It was the cape. An instantaneous change passed over Renne's world; the wine soured; a sharp wind arose which ruffled his hair and temper; every old crack and blister showed out plainly on the varnished parts of his bicycle, and even the rubber tire looked miserable, notchy and worn.

Renne's heart turned sick as he sat lost in dejected reflection. All the energy and strength of mind which he brought so courageously into play while earning his daily bread seemed to melt away and disappear before the disastrous loss of the cape. As he sat with his head buried in his hands he pictured his return and reception by Mme. Renne. It would not take her half a second to discover his misfortune, he thought, and well he knew what scenes would ensue—tears, lamentations, reproaches, sulks and outbursts of rage, in which the little vixen fairly reveled in her moments of uncontrolled fury.

Gracious heavens! Seized with a chill, he hurriedly paid his bill at the restaurant, and, jumping on his poor old bicycle, which had beaten the record coming, he started homeward. One wagon passed him after the other—first a butcher's cart, next an old fat woman driving a donkey, then a gypsy wagon, with an impudent, long haired rascal who stared mockingly but uneasily after him. Renne felt very much inclined to question him about his cape, but a feeling of reticence withheld him, for he strongly suspected that the man had found it, and that it lay hidden somewhere under the lot of quarreling, crying rats which filled the wagon back of him, so he pedaled on hopefully, believing that he might yet find it on the road just where it had fallen. And as he watched and thought it over his temper rose scathing and sarcastic. A cloak, forsooth, with a summer sun shining overhead. It was hot enough to boil eggs. Oh, to the devil with the thing! He hoped that it was lost forever. What did he care? But suddenly the mocking look in the tramp's eyes came back to him. Of course the fellow had found and taken his cape. Renne felt sure of it now. What could he do about it, though—follow him and search his wagon? Suppose, after all, the man had never seen it—how like a fool he would look!

And so, little by little, his anger subsided, and the ridiculous side of the affair presented itself to his mind so forcibly that he felt like screaming with laughter. His wife appeared before him in a different light altogether. She was no longer a being to be dreaded, but to be ridiculed, and he pondered slowly over a summary vengeance to be administered upon the tormentor who had been oppressing him for years. He would bear no more of her petty persecutions. Neither would he drag coats and capes about on his bicycle through the summer heat and dust, and they might as well understand each other for once.

But as he pedaled along different considerations suggested themselves to his excited imagination. The cloak was new and had cost 29 francs. It was stupid of him to have lost it. And if his wife had urged—nay, forced—him to carry it, it was more from love than hate. After all, it would be idiotic to lose it, and the instinct of ownership awakened within him as he thought of the old Bohemian driving his wagon, and perhaps laughing at him in his beard as he passed, and in turning the angle of the road he shook his fist revengefully after the tramp.

"Where is your cloak?" called out Mme. Renne in shrill accents before he was off his wheel. "Oh, heavens, you have lost it!" And she raised her hands in horror.

"My cloak? Oh," indifferently, "it was too hot and heavy to lug about, and I sold it."

"What! You sold it?" stammered the small scold, gazing upon him with a mingling of fear and distrust in her eyes. She began to fear for his reason. This calm might turn into fury. He could not be sane.

Drawing 35 francs from his pocket, he handed them to her and said, "You see, I have made 6 francs by the bargain and you can buy yourself a little present with the surplus."

Still worried and suspicious, although utterly disarmed, she wanted to know in a breath where and how and to whom he had sold his cape.

"I met a poor fellow in a cafe who was ill with a severe cold or something. He had a bad cough and eyed my cape so wistfully that we entered into conversation, you understand," and he whistled gayly, delighted with his clever falsehood. He had been hoarding his pennies for days to eke out these 35 francs, but he thought them well invested, for at least he was rid of his odious cape.

His wife turned the money over thoughtfully in her hand, and after a moment's pause said, "I will buy you another exactly like it tomorrow."—Paul Marguerite in Parisian.

CANINE FRIEND IN NEED

How the Greyhound Rescued the Little Spaniel

"Talk about the sagacity of dogs," remarked Jenkins as he scornfully surveyed the records of the good deeds done by canines in general. "Why, I saw something one day which beats the world—something which, in addition to proving the reasoning power of dogs, showed also that some of them at least possess a great capacity for affection for their own kind. A friend of mine up town owns several dogs, among the lot being a magnificent greyhound and a diminutive spaniel, the two dogs, notwithstanding the disparity in size, being warm friends. One summer day the dog catcher wagon was making the rounds and, as usual, was missing the ones while corralling the animals which are well taken care of. It happened that my friend's front gate had been left open, and the two dogs mentioned escaped into the street just as the wagon turned the corner. There was a great cry on the part of the catchers, who grasped their nets and made a scramble for the little spaniel, not seeming to like the idea of tackling the big hound. The poor little spaniel realized her danger and attempted to escape. She flew like one possessed in every direction, only to be headed off by the men with the nets and a score of small boys. She finally halted, panting, in the middle of the street, and one of the men approached her with his net. It seemed that the little thing's doom was sealed.

"Suddenly there was a fierce bark, and the big greyhound came leaping into the crowd, scattering the small boys and compelling the catchers to take to the wagon. The hound reached the side of the spaniel and, taking in the situation, reached down, grasped his wee companion in his capacious mouth and was off down the street like a shot. He didn't stop for the gate, but with a great, graceful leap, was over the fence, and then, gently depositing the spaniel on the ground, stood wagging his tail, as if knowing that he had discomfited their enemies, while the spaniel gamboled and made the welkin ring with her shrill barks. If that wasn't a great thing, I don't know."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Caged monkeys are tolerably certain to give an indication of coming bad weather, being then more ill natured and quarrelsome than at any other time.

ENGLISH HOP YARDS.

HARVEST SCENES DESCRIBED BY AN AMERICAN VISITOR.

Work That Requires Application During Long Hours For Small Returns—Picturesque Situations but There Is Too Much Poverty to Admit of Poetry.

Yesterday I spent at Malling, an ancient market town about 30 miles from London, which is in the midst of one of the most fertile and extensive hop districts in the world, the soil being of the rich quality that produces the famous golden hop. I stood on an eminence and surveyed in every direction the plantations of tall hops, luxuriant on the straight, firmly set poles, the deep green of the vine leaves beautifully gemmed by the great bunches of golden flower. On a hillside a little distance to the left were the uniform white tents of the hop pickers, like the encampment of an army—for you must know that the hop pickers are not residents of the neighborhood. They come from distances by families, a large proportion of them from London. And, be it known, the majority of the hop pickers are wretchedly poor. The pay for hop picking is so very little that only by the united efforts of a family of three or four workers is the result of the day's labor worth the effort. Last year, for example, the pay for picking was a shilling for seven bushels, so that a worker had to complete seven bushels before the shilling was earned. This year conditions are a little better, but at the best hop picking is only profitable when the family has six or eight pairs of expert hands to strip the vines swiftly. Some of the women have reduced this picking to an art, the deft facility with which they take four or five flowers at a time completely deceiving the novice, who imagines skill to be nothing in this business.

The poles in a hopfield are so perfectly set at right angles that you may look down a uniform avenue of overhanging vines in whatever direction you turn your eyes. But this exactitude is less for beauty of appearance than for convenience of arrangement of picking parties, for a field is let out in small sections, so many hills—two poles make a hill—to a family, according as the family has agreed for half a bin or more. Therefore as you walk down the path that intersects a hopfield, you see here and there at fixed distances apart the different independent groups of pickers, their canvas bins, with wide, flaring mouths, all of regular size, stretched on poles and set on crosspieces the length of their section, and while the man cuts the vines a third of the way up the poles and pulls up the poles to carry to the bin side the women and children incessantly work from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m., save only for the half hour at noon for dinner. And what a sight it is! At the very edge of the field where I spent most time rears, rugged and tall, the ivy draped tower of St. Leonards, said to be the very first, and therefore the oldest, of the Norman towers, the picturesque ruins of which so interest the intelligent visitor to rural England. This tower was built by Gundulf, bishop of Rochester, somewhere about 1078-90. This abbey, by the way, has been restored and is once more a home of nuns. At the foot of this old tower yesterday rolled and tumbled a score of grimy, half naked, tatterdemalion children, of ages running from the infant that should have been in arms to a pair of 4 year old twins, in patched, dirty red dresses, and with huge brass earrings hiding the lobes of their unclean little ears. Thus did half barbarous young modesty kick up its slovenly little legs in contempt of that still grim though dismantled tower, built eight centuries ago to repel the assaults of those savages who were forerunners of the present day Englishman.

And among the vines yonder were the motley groups of persons to whom these little human blots appertained. Not by any means as picturesque and fascinating as Italian grape pickers, nothing of the rich, dark beauty of the southern types, but a different sort of interest attaches to these hopelessly ignorant, half vagrant creatures, who have come to the picking—by donkey cart, by tram, on foot—bearing with them their miserable utensils for cooking and faring, in their rags and their tatters, the filth of which they are not ashamed, sleeping by night in tents if they are so fortunate, behind hedges and under rude wigwams of boughs, if they must, working from day dawn to evening close for a mere pittance—yet not wolfish or surly, not rude—indeed, good natured when you address them, and in rough way jocular or in shy way communicative. Here and there, to be sure, something more pretentious, the epitome of lower middle class thrift and tidiness, but in the main a hop picking scene such as you may witness at Malling tells you what pitiful poverty and wretchedness are hidden from the world by the purple splendor of the richest nation upon which the curious sun looks askance.

Fill in imaginatively the picture of which I have given but true outlines. Hear the hillside encampment wherein fancy and age swarm about the evening fires. Walk through the fields of vine girt poles, that seem a compact mass as you look down upon them. Talk with those women and children stripping the yellow flowers swiftly from the stems. Glance at the various troops of thoughtlessly begotten infants rolling on the green grass or burrowing in the soft earth, and then, as you blow the froth from your next glass of beer, reflect how the best hops yielded by bountiful nature are gathered for your benefit.—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

Miles on the Indian.

A champion has risen up for the Indian in the person of General Miles. The Indian fighter has become the most earnest and aggressive of Indian defenders. This fact and an energetic defense of General Custer are the salient points in the Miles memoirs. In his opinion the red man has distinguished himself as diplomat, statesman and warrior and may be good even while he is alive. In speaking of Custer, General Miles says, "I have no patience with those who would kick a dead lion," and he attributes the lion's death in part to general ignorance throughout the army as to the strength of the enemy, and in part to the failure of Major Reno to assume responsibility for the movements of his forces.—Chicago Journal.

Noses.

It is a somewhat singular fact that the rarest of all noses is that found where one would naturally expect to find it—in the middle of the face. Taking 100 heads at random, one will not find, on an average, more than three in which the bridge of the nose descends perpendicularly from a straight line drawn exactly between the eyes.

THE GIRL EMIGRANT.

She leaned out of the carriage window and saw the van door close, and then asked the porter if her box were safe and sound.

"Aw, aye," said he and slouched up, wiping the wet from his hand on his corduroys, "Aw, aye, it'll folly ye safe to Drogheda anyhow. Goodby, an God speed ye."

"Goodby," she said and gave him her hand. "But aren't the rest o' ye comin?" she called.

The station master came and gave her a parting word, then two or three town loiterers, then the station master's wife, with a shawl over her head and picking her way through the puddles. Last of all came a man—the girl's father, one could see—running stiffly and glancing back often at the horse and cart standing forlorn outside the gate.

"Goodby, Mary, an God be with ye, my girl." He held her hand for a second or two, and his lips kept moving, while she answered bravely. "Ye'll write from New York?"

"I will—aw—at once."

"Do. Don't keep us," he said, then stood back with the others and blinked at the driving rain. She pulled a handkerchief from a battered brown handbag and nervously wiped her lips.

"Ah," called she, "yez all thought yez'd see me cryin. Ah, I tricked yez rightly."

"Ah, no," answered the porter. "We knew ye'd be brave."

"Aye, aye," assented the rest and shifting their legs. "Aye, aye."

"Away ye go!" shouted the guard. The engine shrieked. Mary shook out her handkerchief and called goodby; her friends waved their arms. She had started for the United States.

"They thought I'd cry," said she as she sat back and fell to plucking at the fingers of her woolen gloves. "They thought I'd cry—och, no." She was brave, yet her lips were quivering, and her eyes were turned mournfully on the fields and hedges and the cottages, here and there shining white through the gray drift of the rain. "We'll soon be at it," she said presently. "Ah, Lord, the day it is. An the state I'm in—och, och!" She stooped and wrung the water from her bedraggled skirt. "An me hair that tattered. Aw, it's shockin. But I didn't cry," she said and flashed her black eyes at me. "Och, no. Whisht! We're gettin near it. Aw, there it is. There they are. Goodby, mother. Goodby, Patsey an Johnny an Lizzie. Goodby, all."

I stood up, and over her hat caught a glimpse of the group gathered on the street before the cottage—the mother in her nightcap, the children bare legged, all waving their arms and caps and crying their farewells.

That was the last of them she would see, she said, as she sat down again—the last, till the Lord knew when. She was for the United States? asked some one. Ah, she was, she could get work there, she could do nothing at home. Sure, it was better to go than to be a burden on them all. Ah, yes, she'd been out before and had come home to settle, but—but, and here the handkerchief went fast to her lips—well, things had turned out troublesome. She'd do better out there. There were too many at home, and her mother was poorly. Ah, and sure times were shocking bad.

"Aye, aye," the men went in chorus, "they war, they war." Then looked mournfully at her red cheeks, and from one to another passed the word that she was a brave girl, so she was—a brave girl, and God speed her, said they as one by one they went out clumsily at Navan station and left Mary and me together.

It was a fair day at Navan, therefore did the train settle itself by the platform for a long rest.

"The guard mebbe's gone to see the fair," said Mary, and I laughed, stamped vigorously (for it was cold) across the carriage floor, wiped the window and looked out.

Down the farther bank of the railway, along a narrow path which had started beyond the fields somewhere near the Boyne, was coming a little procession of six men, bearing a coffin on a rough hurdle made of ash poles. The men were bare headed, a single bunch of wild flowers lay atop the streaming coffin, there were no mourners, nor anywhere could one see any sign of sorrow or curiosity. They came on down, the men with their pitiful burden, crossed the track, came to a siding, slid the coffin into a fish van, shut the door, pulled their soft felt hats from their pockets, mopped their faces, then took shelter behind the van and lit their pipes. There wanted only a bottle to make the scene complete, and I was confidently watching for it, when right at my elbow there rose a great sobbing.

"Aw, aw!" cried Mary. "Did ye see, did ye see? Och, what a way to be tr'ated. An such a day for a buryin. All out in the wet—the wet an the cowld. Aw, poor creature! Aw, mother, mother, ye'll die, ye'll die! I'll niver see ye ag'in, nor father, nor no one! Aw, it's cruel to lave ye! I'll go back. I'll go back!"

Her sobs were pitiful. Loiterers began to gather round the door. It was only a poor girl going to America, I explained. They would pity her, I was sure. Oh, they would, said they, and went, all but one, a big, sunburned fellow, dressed in rough tweed, who came forward and asked my leave. For what? Ah, he knew the girl. Came in, went over and laid a rough hand on Mary's shoulder.

"Ah, don't," she said. "I'll go home, I'll go home!"

"What ails ye, Mary, at all?" said he and shook her again. She turned.

"Ah, God A'mighty, James!" she cried, and her tears went, "it's you? Where are ye goin? What brings ye? Who towld ye?"

James sat down heavily and began beating his boot with his stick. Ah, he'd been to the fair, had sold early, was waiting for a train to take him home.

"Where are ye goin?" he said over his shoulder. "What were ye bleartin about?"

She looked up at him quickly, almost defiantly.

"To the United States."

He nodded, began again the tattoo on his boot, and before another word came the train had started.

"We're goin," said Mary. "Hurry and say goodby, or they'll shut ye in."

"No matter," he answered. "I'll g'wan a bit."

The maid sat apart from the man and answered his abrupt, mannerless questions as bravely as she might. Why was she going? Ah, he knew. There was no need to ask. Why had she not told him? Better not. What was the use? All was over between them.

The man eyed her wonderingly. Over, he repeated. Over? Did she not know he was ready to make it up—to do his best? Aye, yes, she knew, still—Still what? It was better to go, she said, and looked tearfully out at the flying fields.

Yes, it was better to go. I agreed with Mary. He was a lout, for certain; a good for nothing by all chance. She would [illegible]. There—there, sitting beside him, was the trouble about which she had spoken. She had come home to [illegible] with him, but things had been troublesome. Ah, yes, one knew it all. He had been easy going and lazy; waited things to turn up; felt no inclination to hurry into married cares. Ah, sure, he could wait awhile, and if his, then Mary. Something like that it had been; anyhow Mary had not settled. They had quarreled, and now she was leaving him for better or worse. She was wise. Had the man no feelings? Had he nothing for her but hard questions and pitying looks? Would he not, before he went, say one kind word to this girl who had trusted in his word and manhood, and, finding them wanting, was now leaving him forever? Did there not some golden memory linger about his heart? Not one. He was wooden to the core. He would sit on there, tapping his boot and staring at his big freckled hands, neither hurt nor sorry, but just wondering that a girl could be such a fool. The train would stop, and, with a nod and a flabby shake of the hand, he would take himself out into the rain. And good riddance.

The train slowed. Mary's lips began to quiver. The train stopped. I gathered in my legs, so that the fellow might pass without touching me. He raised his head and looked out at the sky.

"Ah, I may as well g'wan to the junction," he drawled. "It'll be all the same. One could do nothin' such a day anyhow."

"Yis," said Mary, not cheerfully. "Sure ye may as well."

We sat silent all the way to Drogheda, and there we parted—Mary, so it was set down, to catch a train north, James one back home and I to do my work in town.

Two hours afterward I met the two in the rain swept streets, and in my surprise stopped short before them. Mary looked up and laughed.

"Ah," said she, "I'm here yit. That train went without me."

"Oh," said I, "that's very bad. Why, the next won't be here for hours. And you're drenched. But—but"—and I looked at James as he stood slightly flushed and dripping wet, blandly staring across the street.

"Ah, yis," Mary answered. "James missed his too. I'm not goin at all. Sure we've made it up." I put my watch slowly back into my pocket and nodded. "James has promised me," she went on, and her eyes fell, "an we're goin to get marr'ed come harvest time, an he'll try hard for a place wi' the marquis. An—an—God knows, sur, I'm not sorry, for me heart was sore at l'avin home."

They knew their own business best, but there fell an awkward silence, so I asked James concerning his prospects. Did he see his way clearly? Ah, he did, and began tapping his boots. Sure there was always a way if one could only wait till it came. "Isn't she better here anyway, whatever comes," said he and gave me a moment's glimpse at his face, "than out yonder wid the strangers? Sure 'twas madness av her to think av it. Sure Providence sent me to Navin fair." Providence? And had Providence sent also that dismal procession to the fish van, that Mary might see it and sob for her friends and her James and the home of her heart?

"And you, Mary," I asked, "are you quite satisfied?"

"Ah, yis," said she mournfully. "Ah, I hope so."

I took her into a shop and bought her a little wedding gift—a silver brooch, shaped like a harp and set with green marble—then wished them more happiness than I expected they would have and went my way.

Three hours afterward saw me at Drogheda station again, and there was Mary, standing dejectedly by her box.

"Not gone home yet, Mary?" I asked. Her handkerchief fluttered out.

"No, sur. I—was lookin for ye. I—I wanted to give ye back this," and she held out the brooch. "I'll never wear it. Och, it's all over. I—I'm goin on to catch the ship."

It was well. I determined now that neither Providence nor emotion should hinder her going.

"Ah, no," she sobbed. "'Twas only foolishness. Me heart was sore at l'avin them all, an the sight of the coffin an James comin like that. Och, I c'u'dn't bear it. But 'twas foolish av me. It's better for me to go."

I took the brooch, pinned it on her jacket and spoke a foolish word or two by way of comfort. She would, I hoped, wear it for my sake, if not for—

"Aw, sur," she burst out, "if he'd only been studdy, for I liked him well. Och, och!"

She turned and looked down the platform. There sat James, drunk and asleep.—Shan F. Bullock in Speaker.

VIRGINIA'S ICE MINE.

It Is One of the Greatest Wonders In This Country.

One of the greatest curiosities in the United States, or in the world, perhaps, is the wonderful ledge of ice which exists, even in the midst of the hottest summer in Scott county, Va. This natural icehouse is situated on the north side of Stone mountain and about six miles from the mouth of a small stream known as Stony creek. The marvel is said to have been known to at least one of the early settlers, a Mr. Danridge, who, it is alleged, discovered it while deer hunting away back in [illegible]. Owing to the fact that the land on which it was situated could not be bought, Mr. Danridge positively refused to tell of the whereabouts of the ice ledge, and only visited the place when it was absolutely necessary to obtain a supply to be used in case of sickness.

The old man died many years ago, and from that time until 1893 the location of Danridge's ice mine was unknown, the old gentleman having never even taken his own family into the secret.

In the year last mentioned, however, a party of herb diggers visited the unfrequented region contiguous to Stone mountain and were fortunate enough to rediscover the lost ice mine.

During two or three months in the middle of summer the ice is only protected from the sun's rays by a thick growth of moss. The formation of the ice layer is similar to that of a coal vein, being thin in some places and thicker in others, the average thickness being about four feet. Persons of some scientific attainments who have visited the place for the purpose of studying the wonder say that it has the appearance of having been there since the time of the ice age, which the geologists talk so much about. Another plausible theory is that somewhere beneath the bed is situated a great natural laboratory where ether is constantly formed and expelled, and that the process of freezing is now constantly going on. Whatever view is taken it is one of the greatest natural wonders the state affords.—St. Louis Republic.

McKean County Miner
PUBLISHED EVERY FRIDAY.
SMETHPORT, FRIDAY, NOV 6, 1896.

W[illegible] J— wasn't in it for a minute.

As soon as McKinley's election was assured stocks took an upward jump.

[illegible] W Stone will have over 1,000 majority in the district. [illegible]

The Miner welcomes the man from Kane, commissioner Lemuel Davis. Well, well, come over [illegible].

M[illegible] [illegible] swing [illegible] was in excellent shape for the race and how he did count.

The sweet [illegible] of Illinois was snowed under in the great political battle.

[illegible] liberty paid to keep up with [illegible] Nate but both came under the wire at a rattling pace.

Having saved the country, now [illegible] neighbors [illegible] they can discuss the ordinary affairs of the day.

What's the matter with Bradford? She's all right. So is Kane and Mt Jewett and all other sections of the county.

Voorhis and Dungan, please stand up. The Miner heartily congratulates you both on the splendid majorities you received.

Walter T Merrick, Republican candidate for State Senator, has between 1,800 and 2,000 majority in the district. A nice little plum.

And was it any wonder that the candidates ran well when the rear was brought up by a Cannon in the hands of Foreman Whoopee.

The usual words that have been showered about McKinley during the campaign will soon be forgotten and all will take pride in saying "He is our president."

Sheridan Gorley's name under the wire a fine winner and for three years more will look after the matters of the commonwealth in the District Attorney's office.

The Philadelphia Inquirer claims the election of Alexander Crow Jr for sheriff of Philadelphia county after one of the bitterest local fights in the city's history.

Senator Jones, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, still claims the election, but of course this is only Democratic bravado and he only used it as an excuse to let himself down as easily as possible.

The vote for Messrs Stark and [illegible] candidates for auditor on the Democratic ticket is so close that at time of going to press there is no way of telling who is elected. They will undoubtedly have a plurality to tackle the [illegible].

Old Father Penn and "Daddy Knickerbocker" had a great race last Tuesday to see which could roll up the largest majority for McKinley. Old Father Penn had the honors slightly in his favor owing undoubtedly to greater experience.

The Miner respectfully calls the attention of Mr Layman of the Reporter to the fact that the famous J S Davis will be the next sheriff and it is to be hoped that Mr Layman will never need the attention of the sheriff, but if he does he will find Mr Davis there to represent the dignity of the office.

McKinley has 24 states which will give him 277 votes in the electoral college and a popular majority of over 1,000,000. There will be no doubt about it. The people are with him and a prosperous term promises [illegible] as is the lot of Uncle Sam's children under McKinley's wise statesmanship.

The Spanish and Italian papers see in the election of McKinley the placing of a friend of Cuba in the White House. All true Americans are friends of Cuba, but it should need fear that President McKinley will adopt any other foreign policy than the firm safeguarding of American interests.—Buffalo Express.

To the honest Democrats who would not acquiesce in the stealing of their banner and having it placed on the bunco works of free silver, unsound money, repudiation, etc., and who cast their ballots for good government and the national credit, the Miner wishes to tender the heartiest congratulation. Men who for years have voted Democratic but would not follow this headlong leader of the free silverites down into the [illegible] gulf towards which they were blindly rushing, bravely stood the storm and voted as they thought right and for the nation's good.

As the smoke from the battle of ballots arises and a nearer view is obtained it becomes evident that the American citizen can be safely trusted with the ballot, and that confidence which has been conspicuous by its absence for the last four years will once more be restored and the uncertainty which has prevailed in all business circles will take its departure. The Republican party will again assume charge of national affairs, the credit of which has been very much depleted by the present party in power through incompetent management. Major McKinley as President, with a good working majority in the House and Senate, will soon devise means to restore confidence and the wheels of industry will soon begin to hum once more. True, it will require some time to bring this about, but the peoples' confidence in the government will prove a great leverage in producing a change for the better.

HONESTY VS. ANARCHY.

And Honesty Won by the Largest Popular Vote ever Cast in these United States.

The great battle of ballots fought throughout this great nation last Tuesday and won by the Republicans was not merely a battle of parties for supremacy but a battle with citizens who love their country, love prosperity, love industry, and cherish and uphold the Constitution of the United States on the winning side and such an anarchistic gang as Altgeld, Teller and Tillman followed by populists, socialists and such of the Democratic party as were too hide-bound and stubborn to follow their own honest convictions on the loosing side.

But the battle is won and the men of business can now feel safe in starting the fires in the long cold furnaces and give the idle patriots of protection and prosperity their reward for their ballots—a good living honestly earned.

The victory is a grand one and one that could only be attained by any party when the opposition has made the mistake of insulting the intelligence of the American people.

A noticeable feature of the returns is the enormous pluralities given in the States that give McKinley the electoral vote and the wonderfully decreased pluralities in States that Bryan gets the electors. The only big majority which the Popocrats claim anywhere is in Colorado, while, on the other hand, the Republican States have given unparalleled majorities for McKinley. With New York and Pennsylvania racing for the 300,000, with Massachusetts pulling toward 150,000, Ohio, Illinois and Iowa close to 130,000, with Michigan and Wisconsin hovering around 50,000, and Indiana and Minnesota over 25,000 each, it is past denying that McKinley's majority of the popular vote will be even more significant than his majority in the Electoral College.

LANDSLIDE IN SOME PARTS.

Enormous Vote Polled In All Parts of the Country

Close Vote Registered In Many States of of the South, West and Middle West. Returns in Some Sections Slow on Account of Changes in the Ballot Laws. Chairman Hanna's Predictions in Most Cases Verified—Clean Sweep in Illinois, Altgeld Going Down in the General Crash—Indications Are That President McKinley Will Have a Congress Behind Him Which Will Carry Out the Mandates of the Republican Party. The Immense Vote Polled In All Localities Testifies Abundantly to the Great Interest Taken In the Contest by the People—Bitterness Evinced In Some Sections and Charges of Fraud Made in Others—Rioting in a Few Cases—General Quiet of the Election.

CHICAGO Nov 4.—William McKinley has been elected president of the United States Garret A Hobart, vice president.

The sovereign people have spoken. The money question, the paramount issue of the campaign, has been settled. The existing standard must be maintained until by an international agreement the leading nations of the world shall adopt the double standard.

This, in effect, is what the election of the Republican candidates means. Besides this, it means the enactment of a tariff law which will provide greater revenue than is raised under the Wilson law.

These are the most important promises made by the Republican platform and a majority of the voters of the United States have declared for them.

The victory of the Republican party is a most notable one. Not in many years has such interest been manifested in national politics. The struggle has been a hard and even bitter one in many sections and the enormous vote polled in all localities shows the interest which has been evinced. And this interest has not been confined to this country. England, Germany, France and in fact all Europe having a vital interest in the question at stake and it may be said indeed, that during the past campaign the eyes of the world have been upon us.

While the returns from some distant states are necessarily incomplete, and in other localities uncertainty still lingers, the returns now at hand are sufficient to leave no doubt of the one essential point, namely, that McKinley has been elected and that he will have behind him a congress with a working majority sufficient to carry out the policies enunciated in the platform upon which he was elected.

For the triumph of the Republican party much of the credit will be conceded to the party's standard bearer and successful candidate William McKinley. His efforts during the long and heated campaign have been untiring. For many hours of every day he has stood upon the now famous porch of his cottage at Canton and tendered the hand of welcome to thousands of pilgrims from all parts of the land and expounded to them the doctrines of "sound currency and a protective tariff." Hundreds of addresses were delivered by him to the visiting delegations, and to his personality is due more than to any one man the victory which the Republican party has gained.

RECEIVING THE RETURNS.

Crowds Thronged the Streets of the Metropolis All Night.

NEW YORK Nov 4.—McKinley and Hobart carried New York city and the news at night which told how the votes had been cast in the various assembly districts called out many signs of delight from Republican and gold standard Democrats. McKinley's plurality in New York city will vary only a few votes from 21,000. This was the news that flashed out by a hundred of the most improved methods of the electric age and threw such a pall over the followers of the Democratic candidates that they seemed to melt away and merge into admirers of the Napoleon of Canton. When results were so far known as to announce that Black, Republican candidate for governor had run behind his electoral ticket about 3,000, which indicated his having about one half the plurality given McKinley expressions of surprise could be heard in the crowded streets.

But such a result was naturally to be expected on account of so many Democrats voting the Republican national ticket and refusing to vote the state ticket. Still more comment was made on the vote for Woodruff for lieutenant governor which pointed to his having about 2,000 plurality in the city. General results in the city were known early. Some people seemed to feel them in the air. Colonel Fred Grant, sitting in his office at police headquarters, with the coming in of the first figures and before ordinary citizens had any idea that the counting had really commenced, dashed off a message to Major McKinley congratulating him on receiving the majority of votes in this city and tacking on a line of congratulation at his being next president.

At every point throughout the city where there was even a hint that election returns would be announced was swarming humanity. The people gathered early and with the first flash of lights on the streets anxious faces were shown that studied figures and moving lips that calculated the figures as though their lives depended on it.

With the coming of the first returns, the mass of humanity changed from a crowd to a mob. They packed wide streets and jammed narrow ones, they fought, screamed, struggled. Old men tried hard to get on high places where they would be out of the way of the moving press and where they could tell all who would listen that such crowds had never been seen in the city before.

They told of riots, during which they had fought, fires that had crumbled away blocks of buildings, accidents that had been the talk of the entire country. But none of them, they said, had even as a unit compared with the gathering like a human flood of last night, that flooded into doorways and basements, wound through side streets, washed up on lamp posts and stairways; always moving and never still, never silent.

And this concourse kept up a continual din. There were mingled sounds of horns, of mechanical contrivances, and human voices. In the early hours this confusion could have been understood to have been intended for any candidate city state or national. But when the later hours rolled around the noise increased, but it took up the universal sound that make up McKinley's name. The followers of the advocate of silver had gone home or been converted.

Down town looked as though the acme of excitement had been reached in the dazzling lights and congested crowds. Along Broadway between Twenty third and Forty-eighth streets where the various newspapers had bulletin boards the sight and the sound were even more picturesquely confused. Hotels were deserted for the more stirring scenes of the street. The Fifth Avenue hotel was the one exception. Here politicians gathered. Greely and Herald squares were blotted out and became spaces of heads. Everybody moved, no one made progress. The Tenderloin became what some people picture it who have never been near its streets—jammed ways of flashing light, of oddly dressed women, of smart small boys, of yelling men and sightseers.

NEW YORK STATE

Elections Passed Off Quietly and Quickly In All Parts.

ALBANY Nov 4.—Never in the history of national elections has there been such a quiet and orderly election as that which marked the close of a heated and remarkable campaign conducted in this state. At no one point in the state was the voting made difficult by either attempted fraud or violence. Some idea of the interest and intensity of feeling in the result was, however apparent in the manner in which the vote was cast. Phenomenal in all its features was the early rush to the polls and the quiet and orderly casting of the ballots. In many districts the registered vote was polled at 3 o clock and poll clerks and watchers sat idly by.

Hardly had the polls closed when the results from small districts began to come in and the city vote in New York and other cities began to be tabulated. Exceedingly interesting were the deductions from these returns. When the early ones were in it was evident that the vote cast for McKinley in the cities of the state showed in comparison with 1892 and allowing for the increased registration was a gain for the Republicans of at least 10 per cent, a corresponding loss for the Democrats, and the significant fact that the gold Democrats ticket only from 1½ to 1½ per cent of the entire vote.

This was in excess of the claim of the Republicans as to McKinley's expected gain but was a general confirmation of the statement made days ago that the alleged supporters of the gold Democratic ticket would in a large measure vote for McKinley. In the state at large outside of New York and Brooklyn the talked of gain of the Democrats from the regular Republican pluralities were not apparent at all. With at least one-half of the precincts heard from McKinley ran far ahead of the Harrison vote while Black and Woodruff the candidates for state officers, were about on even terms with the Morton vote of 1894 even allowing for the increase in registration. Morton for governor carried the state by 156,000 and lost New York city. It was noticeable that Black ran somewhat behind McKinley in the fight, but not as much as had been predicted.

REPUBLICAN HEADQUARTERS.

News of Victory Received by the Leaders at Chicago.

CHICAGO Nov 4.—At the headquarters of the Republican national committee elaborate preparations had been made for the reception of the election returns. The wires of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies and those of the long distance telephone had been strung into the office and a small army of accountants was on hand to tabulate the figures and compare them with the votes of 1892 and 1894. The news was late in starting and for a time slow in coming. The first message that did not deal with the condition of the weather and was not more of an indefinite promise than a statement of actual conditions came from Donald McKay the chairman of the Oregon state central committee. It was as follows

"The city of Portland gives a majority of 5,000 for McKinley and this means the state for the Republican ticket.

"This is a good order to start on " said Vice Chairman Payne "but it's only the first raindrop of the coming deluge. We will have plenty more of the same in the sweet bye and bye "

Then ensued an hour of indefinite messages from all points of the country all of them of an encouraging nature to the Republican cause. Then came a message from Baltimore saying that Chairman Rusk of the Democratic city central committee conceded that city to McKinley by 15,000. "That means Maryland for us, I think," said Mr Payne quietly. "We are going now and they will never catch us.

AT HOBART'S HOME.

NEW YORK, Nov 4.—Until reports from New Jersey had been received Mr Hobart was unwilling to admit that his election was certain. Then as the night grew old he became more confident and gave to the correspondents the following signed statement:

It now seems certain that the cause of sound money triumphed gloriously. I look for an era of prosperity and a national policy based upon the principles which the people, without regard to party, have today upheld.

GARRET A. HOBART

It was after midnight when the enthusiastic crowds dispersed. Time and again during the evening Mr Hobart appeared upon the porch while thousands surged about the house. The air was thick with the smoke of fireworks. Bands played and men shouted themselves hoarse.

At midnight Mr Hobart received the following from Mark A. Hanna:

I cannot express my feeling. You and your wife, I hope, share the joy I feel in the result of this victory. Your personality has contributed a full share, and I deem it an honor to have represented such a candidate.

M. A. HANNA.

Arthur Sewall Interviewed.

BATH, Me, Nov 4.—Arthur E Sewall was interviewed in his home regarding the result of the election. Said he: "We will be under a government controlled by syndicates for the next four years as well as by injunction. Mr Bryan received 140 electoral votes, which shows there are some honest men in the country."

Forecast of Congress.

NEW YORK Nov 4.—Returns show that the Republicans have elected 200 congressmen, Democrats 50, Populists 11, National Democrats 1, Josiah Patterson of Tennessee. This leaves 85 districts to be heard from.

Estimate of the Senate.

NEW YORK, Nov 4.—The Tribune's estimate of the next senate of the United States is as follows: Republicans, 42; Democrats, 23; gold standard Democrats 4; Populists, 5; doubtful, 6.

How the Legislature Stands.

ALBANY, Nov 4.—The legislature will stand: Republicans, 27; Independent Republican, 1; Democrats 6; total, 34.

McKinley's Total Plurality.

CLEVELAND Nov 4.—Chairman Hanna says McKinley will have over 1,000,000 plurality on the popular vote.

A LAWYER HIRED BY THE DAY.

And the Reason He Quit This Job Precisely on Time.

With the name of Rufus Lockwood is recalled to mind one of the most extraordinary geniuses that the state of California ever produced. It is many years now since Lockwood held sway in the courts of San Francisco. He was, in his day, perhaps the best lawyer in the state, and it was only because of his utter indifference to pecuniary matters that he did not leave a large fortune behind him.

Lockwood went at one time to Horace Hawes, a very distinguished lawyer, and the author of the consolidation act which is now in force. Hawes had a reputation for close figuring and Lockwood knew it. He said, "Mr Hawes, I'll hire myself to you for one year from date at a salary of $25 a day, payable every night."

"All right," said Hawes, delighted to engage the services of the brightest mind in the state at so low a figure—for the salary was not a great one in those days—and the bargain was sealed. It was 11 o'clock in the morning. But from that time on, it is said, Hawes never missed an opportunity of reminding Lockwood of his bondage. He would say in the presence of others, "Lockwood, go fetch that book," "Lockwood, do this or that," etc. Lockwood never said a word, but did as he was bidden, and Hawes enjoyed his triumph.

Finally it came to the day when the year's engagement terminated. There was a most important lawsuit on hand, of which Lockwood had made a careful study. No one in the state could possibly have handled it as he did. Well, on the day in question Lockwood stood in court an array of lawbooks in front of him, and expounded his views in masterly fashion. Suddenly he looked up at the clock and saw that it was the hour of 11. Closing the book from which he was quoting, he turned to Hawes, who was sitting beside him, and said: "Mr. Hawes, a year ago today at this hour I contracted to work for you one year. My time's up, the contract is canceled and I am going."

Thus did he repay his master for the humiliation heaped upon him. Hawes was in the greatest consternation. He could not possibly take up the thread of the case where Lockwood had left it, and he begged and implored him to proceed. But Lockwood remembered, and he turned a deaf ear to all persuasions. He kept his word, the contract had expired.—San Francisco Bulletin.

A Trick of the Trade.

A lady who has been in London told me that as she and her husband were walking along the Strand one day—and they don't think that they look ferociously American—the vendor of a kind of bagpipe whistle was displaying his wares by playing various tunes.

As our compatriots passed him he struck up "Yankee Doodle," and when that didn't seem to have any effect he followed it with "The Star Spangled Banner."

Such ingenuity deserved reward, so the couple purchased one of the pipes.

"How did you know I was an American?" demanded the gentleman.

"'Ow do I know a duck's a duck?" was the reply. "Hi'm an old sailor, your honor, han I've been heverywhere. When a Scotchman goes by hi give 'im 'Bonnie Dundee,' han Hirishman, 'The Wearing hof th' Green,' han I cort he darky just now with 'The Hold Folks hat 'Ome.'"—Polly Pry in New York Recorder.

The only permanent cure for chronic catarrh is to thoroughly expel the poison from the system by the faithful and persistent use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This wonderful remedy proves successful when all other treatment has failed to relieve the sufferer.

The Only One To Stand the Test.

Rev William Copp, whose father was a physician for over fifty years, in New Jersey, and who himself spent many years preparing for the practice of medicine but subsequently entered the ministry of the M E Church, writes "I am glad to testify that I have had analyzed all the sarsaparilla preparations known in the trade, but

GAS HEATERS

We have some thirty styles of heaters, but the most salable style is the Radiant Home No. 20, price $14.

It is handsome, open front, asbestos back and it gets more heat out of a little gas than any other heater made.

GAS RANGES

The Reliable is the best gas range we can find—better than the best of others in twenty different ways.

We sold 500 stoves year ending Sept. 1st and many of them were Reliable ranges, yet we never have a complaint on them.

LAMPS

Our lamp stock this year was bought when makers wanted to sell badly. We have a room full of lamp bargains. There is scarce a lamp style that we cannot sell for less than most dealers pay for it.

Seely's New Society Perfume, Ave Maria, is an exquisite production of daintiness. It is a Society Fad among refined people from ocean to ocean, and is considered the proper thing by all persons who give perfume using more than a passing thought. Sprays from an Ave Maria atomizer captivate you at once; and, by the way, if you are at all interested in "Soap Nicety" and perfection, let us show you Seely's Almond Milk Soap, the great skin beautifier. Fine enough for Queen Victoria, but not a bit too nice for you. Our price, 10c a cake. Money cheerfully given back if you yourself do not think it the equal of any 25c Soap in the market.

LOCAL AND GENERAL

Doc McKinley bill is paid?

Argument court was held Wednesday.

Mrs. [illegible] Sloan, who has been very ill, is slowly recovering.

—Comrade Choate has moved into the rooms over W. D. Gallup's store.

In the case of Tolles of Bradford judgment was arrested and the prisoner discharged.

The Republicans of Bradford will ratify McKinley's election next Tuesday night. "Whoop 'er up."

It is said that some of East Smethport's young men will soon depart for West Virginia in search of work.

The Kendall Tent, K. O. T. M. will give their annual masquerade dance at East Bradford, Thanksgiving eve.

A communication from R. E. Looker of Kane reached us too late for last week's issue and would not answer for this week.

Miss Lulu Keenan entertained a number of her friends last Saturday evening by giving a very enjoyable Hallowe'en party.

Last Saturday Silas Bush removed his fine collection of trout from the fountain in the square to the basement of the court house.

Hallowe'en passed off without the usual amount of damage being done. The youthful population is evidently getting sensible.

John Stull of East Smethport was unfortunate enough to fall and break three ribs while on his way home last Saturday evening.

—Elmer Heath and John Bender the tonsorial artists, have pooled their issues and will do business under one roof at the parlors of Mr. Heath.

Ladies' Home Journal for November is fine. Among the leading articles is one which describes the landing of Jenny Lind and her tour of the United States.

—The small boy and his tin horn evidently feel like rejoicing over the result judging from the noise that has been heard on our streets for the last three days.

Ned Newman has been wearing a pair of crutches since last Saturday's foot-ball game. He will apply for a pension. His claim will be on a skin game disablement.

Jonathan Colegrove and Ira Gleason showed their inherent love of country last Tuesday by coming to the polls and casting their votes for McKinley and sound money.

—The members of the bar from Bradford and Kane who came here Wednesday to attend argument court seemed happy and contented, so much as to say, we did our duty.

McClure's Magazine for November is very interesting and among its best articles is one, the first Republican convention held at Chicago, in which it describes the nomination of Abraham Lincoln.

—Robert Harper will lecture at the opera house Nov. [illegible] Subject "Around the World in a Man of War." This lecture is under the auspices of the Smethport Entertainment Association.

Chairman W. B. Brightman sent a telegram Wednesday afternoon announcing that Potter county had gone for McKinley by plurality between 300 and 1300 and that the whole Republican ticket was elected.

The new engine house and water tank of the B. B. & K. R. R. are completed. The engine house is large enough to accommodate two engines and since it has been painted presents quite an attractive appearance.

The K. O. T. M. dance at Mt. Jewett last Friday evening was one of the most successful events of its kind ever held in the Columbian borough. Several young men from this place attended and report a very pleasant time.

One of the interesting features of next Tuesday's ratification meeting will be an original wheelbarrow act by Rob Disney who will wheel Alex Harrington from the St. James to Kennedy street in payment of an election bet.—Era.

As the political campaign is over from now on we will devote considerable space each week to the farm and house. Care will be used in selecting the best in the hopes that our readers will take the trouble to carefully peruse the articles.

Here is a specimen of the feeling that predominates in our high school on the presidential issue. At a recent vote taken McKinley had [illegible] votes and Bryan [illegible]. The local candidates had even higher majorities. The entire vote was [illegible] for McKinley and [illegible] for Bryan.

The marriage of Miss [illegible] of Geneva, N. Y. to Mr. O. J. Hamlin of Smethport is announced. It will occur in a short time.—Eagle. The MINER is authorized to say that the lady referred to above is known by the name of Miss M. D. Folger.

—Last Tuesday morning R. K. Goulding cast his ballot for McKinley and good government and then started with his family for Mt. Jewett where he will make his home in the future. The MINER wishes himself and family continued success and happiness.

—St. Luke's Guild box is now ready for contributions of second hand clothing. It is desirable that the garments sent be clean and in good repair or that patches be sent with them to enable the guild to put them in repair. The guild room will be open from 2 until 5 Thursday afternoons.

The Sweden Valley Times has been resurrected again, that is, partly. The local page is the same as the Potter Democrat of last week, but the editorial page tells a grevious story about the laws that Mr. Heckert did not repeal when he was a member at Harrisburg a few years ago.

Fully 75 per cent of the voters of McKean were out last Tuesday to cast their ballots as conscience or judgment dictated. 8300 votes were cast of which McKinley had 4864, Bryan [illegible], Levering [illegible], Palmer 11, Bently 1. There were about 2300 more votes cast than in 1892.

—The MINER wishes to congratulate Commissioner Hungiville on his exceptionally fine vote in the county and it clearly demonstrates how popular he is with the people regardless of politics. A majority of about 500 over Mr. Dwyer, his running mate, is all that any man could reasonably expect.

—Andrew Reidy showed the MINER man two paintings last Saturday, one by Miss Brown of Duke Centre representing a bunch of apple blossoms and the other, a collection of roses, by Fred Berryman of this place. Both paintings are remarkably fine and speak well for the artists.

—T. C. Waleman's house and barn, and R. F. Cory's store at Eldred were destroyed by fire last Sunday afternoon. Insurance on the house and barn was $1100. The insurance on the store had just expired. The dwelling house had just been sold to a man named Carpenter who was moving into the house, but the household goods were saved.

—Orvis Gridley of Ceres has an apple tree that bears sweet apples, sour apples and apples half sweet and half sour, quite a curiosity.—Scotiad. We had no idea that the Supreme Court decision in regard to club rooms being allowed to furnish its members liquors had taken effect in Potter county but judging from the above all doubt is now removed.

—Jay McGee of Colegrove, was a pleasant caller last Wednesday. While here he exhibited a draft on the Supreme Hive, L. O. T. M. Port Huron, Michigan, in favor of Gerald and Julia McGee for $1,000 as the death claim of their mother, Mrs. Maud McGee, who died Aug. 14th last. The draft was dated Oct. 10 and speaks well for the promptness of that organization.

—The people of the town were somewhat surprised Saturday last to see a large Swedish flag floating from the flag staff on Holmes & Gilfillan's building on Mechanic street. Many wondered what had caused the change of nationality. Chas. Lilgendahl took advantage of the lumber dealers absence, while they were at dinner, and attached the aforesaid Scandinavian standard to the staff. Mr. Holmes worked on, blissfully unconscious that he was sailing under false colors, until late in the afternoon.

—Last Saturday night Main street was filled with people who were looking for "scrap" and as is usually the case they found it. A gang from Ormsby participated in the festivities. The affair started in front of the Central and after fighting a few rounds they chewed the rag for about two hours. One of Ormsby's brave men hit a man, who was so intoxicated that he could hardly stand, in a very cowardly manner. This was Hallowe'en and though there were about 17 special police not one of them was around. They were regular policemen—invisible. It is about time that such disgraceful scenes were dispensed with in a civilized community.

Supt. McKenna of the B. B. & K. has not been successful in getting a clew to the parties who wrecked the passenger train at Palen's switch last week but hopes soon to be able to bring the guilty persons to justice. He states that three attempts within six weeks were made to wreck the B. B. & K. in the vicinity of Palen's switch and there can be but little doubt that the wreckers reside in that neighborhood. The first time a joint of tubing was placed across the track, the second time some planks were used, and the third time the switch was thrown open. The first two attempts were discovered in time to stop the train.—Bradford Record.

—Bishop Whitehead confirmed a class of fourteen at St. Luke's church on last Saturday evening. On Sunday the Bishop preached two very able and practical sermons to large congregations and also made an address at All Saint's chapel, East Smethport. The music at the services was carefully arranged and fully up to the high standard of St. Luke's choir. The remarkable talent of Mrs. H. S. Rogers as an organist, appeared in the faithful and artistic way in which the resources and combinations of the large instrument were brought out. Mrs. Rogers was the organist at St. Luke's for a number of years until her removal to Mt. Jewett and is not excelled by many professional organists of wide reputation.

Last Monday at Austin, Constable Williams went to arrest a man (without a warrant) by the name of Jack [illegible] and alleged to be keeping a pig's ear. When the officer arrived on the ground he found McD[illegible] had moved to more congenial quarters. The officer then took a young man named Mohn in charge and marched him to the office of Squire Austin. As they were about to step inside Mohn knocked the constable down and made a break for liberty. Constable Williams jumped up and commenced firing at the fugitive sending four bullets after him but failed to score a hit. The people with the constable pursued Mohn to the woods but he made his escape. Things seem to have been rather warm at Austin lately.

A team belonging to Thomas Butler, an aged farmer of Eldred, ran away near the W. N. Y. & P. station in Olean yesterday afternoon about 3:30 o'clock. While standing on Railroad avenue the horses became frightened at a freight train. The team was attached to a wagon containing a quantity of flour, butter and other farm produce. Mr. Butler attempted to hold the horses by their heads. He was unable to manage them however and was knocked down violently. The team ran east on the avenue to the Barry street crossing when the wagon was badly broken and the contents strewn upon the ground. The team ran down Barry street to the river where they straddled a tree and were stopped. Mr. Butler was painfully bruised but fortunately did not sustain serious injuries.—Tuesday's Olean Times.

—The foot ball game at Hamlin Park last Saturday between the Centrals and High School teams resulted in a victory for the High School by a score of 6 to 4. The Centrals scored the first touch down soon after play was called in the first half. Then the High School after a desperate struggle also managed to score a touch down. In the second half both teams played hard and fast. The team work of the school boys seemed to demoralize the Centrals and the students soon added two points to their score on a safety. Although the Centrals played desperately to overcome this lead no other points were made. Ned Newman injured his ankle so severely that he was obliged to retire from the game. The boys are all light in weight, but play a remarkably good game considering the short time they have practiced. Another game will be played soon.

—The subject of the following brief sketch was well known by many of the old Bucktail veterans of this section. He was a nephew of the late James Steele of Port Allegany and a first cousin of the wife of the present proprietor of this paper. "Colonel John M. Steele, a former resident of this county, died at Tacoma, Wash., on Saturday, the 17th inst., at the age of 53 years. He had been a leading real-estate dealer in Tacoma for several years. He went to the war when but 18 years of age as a Lieutenant in the famous Bucktail regiment of this State, and his body bore many marks of wounds received in the battles he went through. After Lee's surrender he came home, and in a few years moved west, settling first at Wichita, Kansas, where he made and lost a fortune. Afterward he moved to Tacoma and became a member of a leading real estate firm. He was prominent and much respected in that city. He leaves a widow and six children, all of whom live in Tacoma excepting the eldest son, [illegible], who is at Rossland, B. C."—Wellsboro Agitator.

—The Baker ballot is a great institution for the voter but every election board in the county uttered some very severe comments on the tickets in making up the returns.

—J. C. Gallup and family have moved into their new residence at the corner of King and Union streets. This residence has been thoroughly improved since it was purchased by Mr. Gallup some time ago. The house has been repainted and repapered throughout, an addition erected containing a dining room, kitchen, bed room, bath room and closets. A new porch has also been constructed. The house is a model of neatness and Mr. Gallup is to be congratulated on being the possessor of so handsome a home.

Conductor McGannon Injured.

Michael McGannon, a B. R. & P. conductor narrowly escaped death yesterday. McGannon is conductor on the train known as the Mt. Jewett Local which leaves this city at 4 p. m. Last evening while the train was switching at Mt. Jewett McGannon fell from the caboose to the track and two freight cars and the caboose passed over him. Two of his toes were run over by a car and crushed. Fortunately McGannon lay between the rails and his body or limbs were not caught by the wheels. He was rolled along the track under the cars and terribly bruised and lacerated. The injured man was attended by Dr. Roberts and subsequently brought to his home in this city.

Later.—The railroad company's surgeons visited McGannon last night and found that his injuries were more serious than at first reported. His right leg below the knee is crushed and the left foot badly injured. His head was also cut in two places. It is probable that the injured leg will have to be amputated.—Yesterday's Era.

When Courting Don't Talk Politics.

Last Saturday night one of our bright young men hired a livery rig and drove some distance to call on his best girl who is a sweet school marm and boards at a house whose owner is a rabid free silverite. The young man got into a political discussion with the old gent who got so [illegible] that rolled and locked the door on the loving couple. The night was not very cold and by means only known to fond lovers they managed to keep comfortably warm until the sad hour of separation came. The young lady then proved that she was made of excellent material. Securing a lantern she accompanied her swain to the barn (it was hallowe'en) they found the bridle wired to the harness and the whiffle-trees wired to the wheels. By a great deal of perseverance and energy on the part of both, matters were soon straightened out and the young man came away feeling satisfied that he had found the right kind of a girl to make a loving helpmeet for a man through life but he has [illegible] never for talking politics again while courting.

A Constable Needed

Last Saturday night from 9:30 to about 11:30 certain parts of Main street were perfect bedlams, owing to the rowdyism of about 25 hoodlums, most of whom were from out of town. Quite a number of them seemed anxious to fight but lacked the nerve to go on—it was principally all talk and profanity. There certainly ought to be an officer appointed who would have the authority to stop such disgraceful proceedings as occurred last Saturday night.

During several years residence in the far west I had many opportunities for observing the wonderful effects of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. Its efficacy was demonstrated in the alkali regions, where the water produces violent purging. It allayed the attack when all other remedies failed. I repeatedly saw the greatest distress from diarrhoea cured in a few minutes. I used the remedy myself with the most satisfactory results, and can recommend it for the complaints for which it is indicated.—H. GIL. NORMAN, editor of the Republican, Phoenixville, Pa. This remedy is for sale by A. B. Armstrong & Co.

Sore Throat Quickly Cured.

Not long ago in speaking of sore throat and the difficulty frequently experienced in curing it, Mr. J. E. Thomas of Uniondale, Pa. told how he had often cured it in his family. We give it in his own words: "I have frequently used Chamberlain's Pain Balm in my family for sore throat and it has effected a speedy cure in every instance. I would not think of getting along in my home without it." Pain Balm also cures rheumatism, sprains and bruises. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by A. B. Armstrong & Co.

Growth of the Tourist System

The Pennsylvania Railroad Company through its personally conducted tourist system and the unexcelled standard of high service has won an enviable record for itself. These tours have grown to be thoroughly appreciated in this age of luxurious travel and the series announced for the season of '96 and '97 admirably illustrates the progress of the times.

First comes a series to the Golden Gate starting from New York, Philadelphia and Harrisburg January 27, February 24 and March 27. Tourists will travel by superbly-appointed special trains of Pullman compartment, drawing-room sleeping, dining, smoking and observation cars under the supervision of a Tourist Agent and Chaperon.

Next in importance comes a series of four to Florida—January 26, February 9 and 23 and March 9. The first three admit of two weeks in the sunny south, while tickets for the fourth tour are good to return by regular trains until May 31.

A series of short tours to Washington from New York, Philadelphia and adjacent points will be run on December 29, 1896, January 21, February 11, March 11, April 1 and 22, and May 13, 1897.

Old Point Comfort, Richmond and Washington tours will leave New York and Philadelphia December 26, 1896, January 28, February 20, March 18 and April 15, 1897.

Handsome illustrated itineraries will be issued by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, containing full information as to how these tours may be pleasantly and profitably made. TURTLE POINT

There was a discussion of the money question at the hall in Turtle Point last Saturday evening. Mr. Connely of Bradford presented the silver side and Mr. R. B. Stone presented the gold side. The remark was made that Mr. Connely had come loaded for bear and the Republicans were asked to produce the bear. Mr. Stone spoke one hour and then gave Mr. Connely a chance to unload at the bear. After blazing away for an hour and a half I suppose he thought that the bear had received a death wound and he sat down. Mr. Stone again took the floor and in less than fifteen minutes Mr. Connley must have discovered that he had unfortunately left the cartridge at home with which he intended to slaughter the animal. Hurrah for McKinley.

How to Ward off an Attack of Croup

In speaking of this much dreaded disease, Mr. C. M. Dixon, of Pleasant Ridge, Pa. said, "I have a little girl who is troubled frequently during the winter months with croupy affections. When ever the first symptoms occur my wife gives her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the result is always prompt and satisfactory." This remedy is used by thousands of mothers throughout the United States, also in many foreign countries and always with perfect success. It is only necessary to give it freely when the child becomes hoarse or as soon as the croupy cough appears and all symptoms of croup will disappear. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle by A. B. Do You Want to be a Martyr?

Probably not. But if you do try and get the dyspepsia by unwise feeding. Then you'll suffer martyrdom with a vengeance! Some people are martyrs to this complaint from childhood to the grave, suffering from all its attendant horrors of heartburn, wind and pain in the stomach, weary slumber and nightmare, capricious appetite, nausea, biliousness, leanness and sallowness. No necessity for all this. The complaint obstinate as it is when the ordinary remedies are brought to bear upon it, invariably yields to the great stomachic, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which restores tranquillity to the gastric region and nerves, regulates the liver and bowels, both of which are disturbed by weakness of the stomach, and promotes appetite and an increase of flesh. That "tocsin of the soul," the dinner bell, when it peals up a the ear suggests no phenomenon of fire qualms after a comfortable meal, if you have tried a course of the Bitters, which also banishes biliousness, rheumatism, nervousness, malaria and kidney trouble.

THE CHEERFUL MAN.

Things That Lighten Life For Hunters In the Woods on Dreary Days.

There is a kind of man who never lacks camping companions. He may be rich or poor, big or little. He may be so weak as to be hardly able to carry his rifle and to be able to bring a stick of wood for the campfire. He is wanted, nevertheless. The campers call him the jovial man, the one who never sulks, but always smiles. He is cheerful when the clouds weep and the campers are dismal. He laughs when he misses easy shots. He grins when the smoke gets into his eyes and says that the nubs and sticks in the camp bed are good, because they give the sleeper plenty of [illegible].

FEATURES OF THE PASSAGE FROM WASHINGTON NORTHWARD.

The Beautiful Bay Dotted With Icebergs, Grandest of All Being Muir Glacier. The Magnificence of Mount St. Elias, Giant Sentinel of the Rockies.

In making the voyage northward from Seattle one has scarcely left the waters of Puget sound before great patches of snow are perceptible on the highest peaks of the colossal range of mountains bordering the inland passage. These gradually grow larger and larger as the steamer wends her way to the north, and [illegible] loftiest peaks, [illegible] are seen [illegible] garments of purest white [illegible] travel brings one [illegible] waters, and by the aid of a [illegible] glass and not infrequently with the naked eye a close observer will see [illegible] the blue sea of glaciers [illegible] under the lower edges of the [illegible]. Lower and lower these descend as the steamer crawls onward, until the northernmost point on the route is reached, where they come down to the ocean level.

Here, in a beautiful little bay, dotted with [illegible] icebergs, some of them higher than the topmost masts of the ships, great walls of deep blue ice form the shores, long arms of [illegible] break from the mother body, as it were, and stretch far back into the mountains, where at the crest of the range they reunite, and, running northward, [illegible] into a continuous [illegible] that line that portion of Alaska's coast for many hundred miles.

This [illegible] Glacier bay, and the most attractive feature is the Muir [illegible] great glacier [illegible] Mr. John Muir, who took the first excursion of the Queen [illegible] the bay and [illegible] which will perpetuate his name while time lasts. Strange Beginning of a Friendship.

I remember the anecdote my stepfather, Count [illegible], who entered La Flèche [illegible] the regulation age of 8, used to tell me. It was the first time he had left his [illegible], and he was somewhat bewildered by the roughness of his comrades, who affected the airs of old troopers. To make sure that he was not a milksop, one of them, a veteran of 12, made him lay his hand flat on the ground, stepped on it and crushed one of his fingers. This tormentor was the future general Baraguay d'Hilliers. The victim, who nearly fainted, bore it bravely, however. "And this was the beginning," my stepfather used to add half a century later, when showing his deformed finger, "of a friendship that lasted all our lives." This happened shortly after the first empire, when Roman virtues were emulated, but one must not infer from this isolated fact that stoicism flourishes vigorously in the French educational system.—Th. Bentzon in Century.

A Common Danger.

If you have ever had a cold which you permitted to wear away it may interest you to know it was a dangerous proceeding. Every cold and cough which is neglected paves the way for consumption, bronchitis, asthma or catarrh. Otto's Cure, the famous German throat and lung remedy will cure any cough or cold and save you from consumption. Call on A. W. Colegrove, Smethport; C. M. Benson, Colegrove; S. W. Stickney, Newerf, and get a trial bottle free.

Many political speakers, clergymen, singers and others who use the voice excessively, rely upon One Minute Cough Cure to prevent husk[iness] and laryngitis. Its value as a preventative is only equalled by its power to afford instantaneous relief. A. W. Colegrove, Smethport, A. E. Stickles, East Smethport.

Tetter, eczema and all similar skin troubles are cured by the use of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It soothes at once and restores the tissues to their natural condition, and never fails to cure piles. A. W. Colegrove, Smethport, A. E. Stickles, East Smethport.

CLOTHING AN ARMY.

It Costs Great Britain Over $5,000,000 to Dress Its Soldiers.

It costs the British government $6,250,000 annually for clothing furnished its army all over the world. Each of the foreign possessions, however, has to pay back to a certain extent the amount which the uniforms of the troops stationed or sent there has cost, and this entails no end of complicated bookkeeping.

India, for instance, pays for the clothing of its own troops, and also for the uniforms of the men which England sends there. The latter item is about $675,000 annually. On the other hand, when a regiment comes home from India, that country has to be paid back the full value of the clothes they wear.

The government sells old and worn-out articles to the secondhand dealers, who, by the way, usually accumulate fortunes in a short time. The value of castoff clothes so disposed of is about $140,000 yearly. The scraps remaining after the uniforms have been cut out also bring a matter of $30,000 annually. In all the authorities receive back about $1,[illegible]00,000, thus reducing the total cost of clothing the army to less than $5,000,000 a year.

The best quality of everything is used in the manufacture of uniforms. In fact, it is said they are too good for durable wear. A huge factory in Pimlico, London, makes a large share of the furnishings, but vast quantities of foot and head gear are bought ready made. Boots and leggings, for example, cost $1,165,000 and headdresses $[illegible].

The thousands of miles of flannel, linen, calico, cloth, velvet, etc., the millions of buttons, the tons of cotton wool, the bundles of yards of sewing cotton, that are made into smart tunics, tidy trousers and warm shirts cost $2,[illegible]. The wages paid for making these up are over $[illegible] a week. Some of the salaries paid for this branch are excellent for England. The inspector of clothing receives $[illegible],000 and his assistants $2,700 apiece, and so on down the long list.

But all this vast expense is probably much less than the annual outlay that France or Germany makes for keeping its soldiers smart in appearance in time of peace. In Germany, for example, every man in the army is said to have four complete suits of military clothing.—New York Journal.

A ZOOLOGICAL DIVERSION.

An Elephant That Used to Play a Clever Trick on Visitors.

The elephant at the Jardin des Plantes at Paris used to play his visitors a trick which could not have been the habit of but by an animal of much intelligence. His house opened upon an inclosure called the Elephants' park, containing a pond, in which he would lay himself under the water, concealing every part of him except the very end of his trunk—a mere speck that would hardly be noticed by a stranger to the animal's habit.

A crowd would assemble around the inclosure, and, not seeing him in it, would watch in expectation that he would soon issue from the house. But while they were gazing about a copious sprinkling of water would fall upon them, and ladies and gentlemen, with their fine bonnets and coats, would run for shelter under the trees, looking up at the clear sky and wondering whence such a shower could come.

Immediately afterward, however, they would see the elephant rising slowly from his bath evincing, as it seemed, an awkward joy at the trick that he had played. In the course of time his amusement became generally known, and the moment the water began to rise from his trunk the spectators would take flight, at which he appeared exceedingly delighted, getting up as fast as he could to see the bustle he had caused.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Most Wheels Are Overoiled.

So many bicyclists have been observed suffering from clogged chains that a word of advice may with propriety be repeated. Oil the chain—nothing is more necessary, but be sure not to have it wet. Each link should be thoroughly lubricated, and then the chain should be rubbed dry. No amount of rubbing, it should be remembered, can remove the oil from the parts between the links, where it is needed, and not a particle of oil is required on the exterior surface. The drier that is the better. The oil, if exposed, picks up and holds dust and adds greatly to the friction. The same advice applies to all oiling. If so much is put in the bearings that some overflows and it is not wiped off, dust will gather at the spot, and even in the best made bearings some of it will almost certainly work into the balls and make trouble. And even if it does not get so far the bunches of dust so accumulated detract from the appearance of an otherwise well groomed machine and render the cleaning after a run twice as difficult as it need be. The fact is that more wheels are overoiled than underoiled. "Carrying a canary," as the "wheelmen" call riding with a dry bearing that squeaks, is not half so common as a dust buried bearing. Of course, of the two, the latter is preferable, but no rider need have either.—New York Post.

Collar Bands.

The collar bands on the new gowns are one of the special points of decoration, and frills of some sort are invariably set on the edge to stand up around the neck, commencing a little distance apart on either side of the front. They are made of knife plaited silk, ribbon, lace or chiffon, and one very effective trimming is lace in vandyke points, outlined with a tiny ruche of [illegible] and gathered into the neck. Plain velvet collars, with plaitings of ribbon set in fan shape at the back, are very pretty, and collars made of bias folds of light velvet or satin, with narrow, black, pearl edged ribbon edging each fold, are another fancy.—New York Sun.

Relief in Six Hours.

Distressing Kidney and Bladder diseases relieved in six hours by the "New Great South American Kidney Cure." This new remedy is a great surprise on account of its exceeding promptness in relieving pain in the bladder, kidneys, back and every part of the urinary passages in male or female. It relieves retention of water and pain in passing it almost immediately. If you want quick relief and cure this is your remedy. Sold by A. B. Armstrong, Druggist, Smethport, Pa.

A Note from the Editor.

The editor of a leading State writes: "If you had seen my wife last June and were to see her to-day you would not believe she was the same woman. Then she was broken down by nervous debility and suffered terribly from constipation and sick headache. Bacon's Celery King for the Nerves made her a well woman in one month." A. W. Colegrove, Smethport; C. M. Benson, Colegrove; S. W. Stickney, Newerf. Large size 25 and 50 cents.

Chronic constipation is a painful, disagreeable and life-shortening difficulty. It deranges the system, causes sick headache, bad breath and poisons the blood. It can be readily overcome by DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These little pills are great regulators. A. W. Colegrove, Smethport, A. E. Stickles, East Smethport.

English Spavin Liniment removes all hard, soft or calloused lumps and blemishes from horses, blood spavins, curbs, splints, sweeney, ringbone, stifles, sprains, all swollen throats, coughs, etc. Save $50 by use of one bottle. Warranted the most wonderful blemish cure ever known. Sold by A. B. Armstrong, Druggist, Smethport, Pa.

They are so little you hardly know you are taking them. They cause no griping, yet they act quickly and most thoroughly. Such are the famous little pills known as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. Small in size, great in results. A. W. Colegrove, Smethport, A. E. Stickles, East Smethport.

The papers are full of deaths from

Heart Failure

Of course the heart fails to act when a man dies, but "Heart Failure," so called, nine times out of ten is caused by Uric Acid in the blood which the Kidneys fail to remove, and which corrodes the heart until it becomes unable to perform its functions.

Health Officers in many cities very properly refuse to accept "Heart Failure," as a cause of death. It is frequently a sign of ignorance in the physician, or may be given to cover up the real cause.

Warner's Safe Cure

A Medicine with 20 Years of Success behind it will remove the poisonous Uric Acid by putting the Kidneys in a healthy condition so that they will naturally eliminate it.

THIS MEANS YOU.

Do you own horses or cattle? Pulsifer's Veterinary Medicines for horses and cattle are warranted to cure each claim made for them. Your dealer is authorized to refund the money in every instance of failure to effect a cure of any disease specified on our labels, if used according to directions. You don't risk a cent by a trial. What more can you ask?

PULSIFER'S COLIC CURE.

This preparation is offered to the public as a reliable remedy, [illegible] substitute for the old-fashioned bulky remedies heretofore employed in the treatment of that most dangerous disease COLIC. A syringe for administering the dose accompanies each bottle, and the whole package is so compact that it can be easily carried in the pocket. The price at which it is sold is much lower than any other colic cure on the market, thus reducing the actual cost of curing a case of colic to five or ten cents. The dose is only thirty drops, given without drinking.

You can't fool with colic, nor waste time hunting up medicines. Veterinaries can't always be found when wanted, nor are drug stores always open. Put the colic cure in all the veterinary or drug store you need. It should be kept in the stable ready for use.

There is more fatality among horses from colic than from any other cause. Unless some immediate relief is afforded the chances for recovery are slight. Inflammation sets in, resulting almost invariably in death. Pulsifer's colic cure never fails to cure spasmodic, flatulent colic, or stoppage of the Water, if treatment is begun within one hour of the first attack. It has often cured where no relief has been given in hours. Pulsifer's colic cure avoids delays. Delays mean dead horses. Horses cost money. A concise manual describing the symptoms of the ordinary diseases to which the horse is subject, together with the simple method of treating the same. Mailed to any address on receipt of two cent stamp.
